At the fashion show “Go Beyond”, the fashion master class at the Lette Verein in Berlin will display outfits created alongside the exhibition “Images in Fashion – Clothing in Art”. The designs by these graduate students were inspired by a range of 20th-century artists and artworks. The presentation of 70 gowns by 22 designers will take place in the main stairway hall at the Berlinische Galerie, accompanied by a projection of drawings set to music.

The fashion master class is funded by the Senate Department for Integration, Labour and Social Services. It offers particularly talented graduates – currently 16 from two outgoing years – an opportunity to spend a year honing their personal styles and enhancing their knowledge of production techniques and business management. The course in fashion design, with its three sections fashion design | costume design | fashion media, attaches major importance to “thinking the craft of design through to the end”.

“Go Beyond” participants

Master class: Alexander Arnold, Lena Beck, Jola Deking, Wanda Kleinhellefort, Jihun Ko, Darlene Preneta, Eunike Ritz, Alicia Schikowski, Johannes Stoehr, Tamika Threatt, Anna Martha Thomas, Felicitas Volk

Lette Verein Berlin

Lette Verein Berlin is a foundation incorporated under public law. It was first set up in 1866 by Wilhelm Adolf Lette as an “association for the promotion of the female sex”. Full-time training is provided for ten different professions at the college building on Viktoria-Luise-Platz.

About the exhibition

Fashion and art are mirrors of social change and individual needs. The exhibition “Images in Fashion – Clothing in Art. Photography, Fine Arts, and Fashion since 1900” (until 30 May 2022) contains about 270 exhibits: fashion photographs, paintings and drawings, complemented by loans of selected garments, illustrating the role that fashion plays in self-expression and in representing its times.
